Humanity's Suicide

👁 42 ✓ 0 ★ 4

Chapter 1 by Morgan Paulett

The year is 2020. Syria, Libya and Iraq are near non-existent. Their states have fallen into total collapse, weakened by Western intervention and the rise of ISIS. Now Syria is the Islamic State and is bombarded by Russian, British, American, French, German and Chinese aircraft. No official plan is reached by Russia and China with the Western powers as petty politics keeps the nations apart. Unknowingly to Russia and China, the US and UK have deployed SAS and a US Green Berets division to assassinate Caliph Abu-Bakr Al Baghdadi. The same night the mission takes place, Russian and Chinese forces lead a combined airstrike on Assad's former palace in Damascus, where Baghdadi has taken place.

On the 21st July, the mission is started. At 3:04am, the airstrike is conducted. Six SAS and four Special Forces are killed and the rest are captured and are currently held prisoner in Damascus. In response, the US places six-thousand tanks and several hundred thousand troops on the Russian-European border. Russia reacts with backing from China and India (BRICS) by reinforcing it's border. In the tensest geopolitical situation since the Cuban Missile Crisis, the fate of the world hangs in the balance and rests in the hands of a few powerful individuals...
